Good morning Limetree Green.

We hope you immersed yourself in yesterday's activities and grew your brain with all the interesting facts you learnt about bees.

We are really looking forward to seeing your pictures, videos and hearing the results of your flower science experiment.

For Today's exciting journey of learning you will need to use your thinking skills to guess what book we will be using.

Here are some clues.

The story starts by the light of the moon.

This creature ate different foods every day of the week.

They slept in a cocoon for two weeks. (They must have been really tired from all that eating)

Have you guessed the story?

Have some thinking time.....

You are correct!

The story is The Very Hungry Caterpillar by Eric Carle.

We hope you have lots of fun experimenting with symmetry, making smoothies and learning about life cycles.

From Limetree.
