

Monday 4th May

Dear Elm Class

Dobré Ráno! That's good morning in Slovakian, our new Language of the Week! Can you say good morning in any other languages? How about our Good Morning Language song that we sing along to Giles with?

Our Topic today is I Spy with My Little Eye. This means we will use our eyes to find and talk about the things we can see at home, through the window, in the garden or on the balcony.

Take some time today to observe your surroundings and try to look for specific details that make what you can see different from everything else.

Our story of the day is a favourite of ours- Walking through the Jungle by Barefoot Books! Don't worry if you don't have the story because you can view video by clicking on the following link.

Walking Through The Jungle: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=plvYOquSyJg>

Other activities for you to explore are:

- I Spy With My Little Eye game- A traditional game finding the object that the spy is describing to you indoors/outdoors
- What Is Missing- Observing a selection of items and then removing one of them. You then have to guess which item is missing.
- Observational Drawing- Noticing what is in your environment and drawing/painting what you can see.

As always, please send in pictures so they can be added to our online gallery. It's been a pleasure seeing all the hard work some of you have done and you look so proud of all your achievements! Well done☺.

Wishing you a good day,

Miss Dixon

