Good Morning Limetree Yellow!

I hope you all had a lovely weekend. Would you like to share your weekend news? Perhaps you can pick up a phone and make an imaginary phone call, to tell me all about it. I do miss hearing your news!

Today you are going to read another of my favourite stories: 'Come away from the water, Shirley', by John Burningham. He also wrote 'Mr Gumpy's Outing' - an excellent story. Today's story is a little bit unusual, as you have to look very closely at the pictures. The author tells us the story of Shirley going to the beach with her mummy and daddy and playing on the shore; however, the pictures tell a tale of a pirate adventure. I wonder, once you've read it, will you believe Shirley went on the pirate adventure or will you believe it was all in her imagination.

Today you will have your own water adventure, using your imagination. You'll also create some amazing edible pirate ships!

Have lots of fun and don't forget to send in photos of your learning.

Love from,

Miss Cassidy
