Good Morning Willow Class!

It's time to...Explore Learn and Have FUN 😊😊

Monday today, and we will carry on with another interesting topic/story with amazing moral lesson about honesty.

“The Boy Who Cried Wolf” is the story of a young shepherd. Growing bored with his work, he shouts “Wolf!” to make the townspeople come running. He laughs at them and at their anger when they find he has tricked them. He repeats the joke, so at last when a wolf really comes, he calls for help but they don’t come, thinking he’s playing tricks on them again.

The hero of this story is a boy, a child, and yet he has a job — or maybe a chore to help out his family. Explain that in other times and places, children have often worked instead of gone to school. Many people now are working toward a time when children all over the world can study instead of working to support their families.

It’s possible to see this story as being about how boredom can cause someone to get in trouble.

Furthermore, our activities today include thinking and expressing in creative ways through art and craft (paper roll wolf and a handprint sheep), learning story sounds and linking sounds to actions, and finally learning how to use cutlery in a safe way.

Enjoy our Rising 3’s initiatives such as letter of the week (Bb), number of the week (15), and language of the week (Macedonian – my native language!).

We wish you a great day and a fab weekend full of fun, love, health and happiness
